

Philadelphia Pile Driver Is A Working Class Hero

JOHN DOOLEY TAKES GREAT PRIDE IN having recently been described as a "Working Class Hero." Although some of his results have gained national exposure, Dooley has maintained his goal of keeping his firm small so that clients receive the individualized attention they want and deserve. He recently hired William J. Coppol, who has the same goals and values. In fact, Coppol "treats the firm's clients like members of his own family."

Dooley is a "card carrying twenty year member" of the Pile Drivers Local Union 454 and the Carpenters Union. His "hands-on" construction experience working on job sites is a unique advantage when it comes to representing his construction clients. Judges and juries realize that his skill and knowledge cannot be learned from any law books.

Sunoco, Inc. learned the hard way that Dooley had more welding experience than its own experts—Dooley was the only "certified welder" in the courtroom when the jury returned a $9 Million verdict for his client. His ability to use practical construction experience in the courtroom consistently results in multi-million dollar recoveries some of which include:

- $9.0 Million – laborer falls from ladder at Sunoco Refinery
- $6.8 Million – roofer falls from ladder
- $3.0 Million – floor layer falls on stairs
- $2.5 Million – mason injured in 12-foot fall
- $2.0 Million – pile driver hit with falling object at Sunoco Refinery
- $1.8 Million – utility worker electrocuted

Dooley wants to ensure that injured victims realize he does not limit his practice to only big construction cases. Dooley and his firm handle motor vehicle accidents, slip and fall accidents, dog bite cases and product liability cases.

Clients and business agents have said the following...

"After my fall, things seemed hopeless. John Dooley brought Sunoco to its knees and changed my life and my daughter's life forever!"
